

Farmers' Alliance policies gained support, and its leaders decided to form a national political party

Populist Party: a coalition of Alliance members, farmers, labor leaders, and reformers-- lasted only a few years -- its stand against powerful interests influenced later politicians

